

(14)Angry ancestors

2002-06-20 Thu

There are many dead people who have the same feelings or thoughts as when they were alive. Many years ago, Mr. A, who had just become a member of the SAS Association came to me and asked about his ancestors. He told me that he had gone to see a psychic to ask about the troubles that occurred continuously before he got to know Shinkiko therapy. According to the psychic, one of Mr. A's ancestors several generations ago, was angry at his selling the house and land that had been a financial burden for Mr. A. He had just sold them, and could not buy them back; he did not know what to do.

Such things often happen. Negative-minded spirits usually have regrets or are particular about life. May be in the case of this spirit, he did various things to his offspring in order to let him know the things he built up. But reality is harsh; there are a lot of hardships in life. Even if Mr. A did not want to sell his properties, he might need the money or might have to sell them due to family matters. There are many cases in which we the living cannot always listen to comments from the dead, since we are living in a different world and in different circumstances.

Shinkiko energy encourages not only the living to change, but also encourages the dead. After all, I told Mr. A to send Shinkiko energy to his ancestor with a High Genki apparatus. The energy makes the feelings of both the living and the dead calm. It will gradually make you carefree about various things. Probably the ancestor just wanted to help and comment for the sake of his offspring. As a lot of ki reaches spirits, it will let them shine much brighter and go to a higher dimension. After that, they will lose their desire to interfere with the people they care for and will watch over them from a higher place. Maybe it is like, "Whatever happens to you, I will support you; so don't worry." By the time the spirit of Mr. A's ancestor was in a higher dimension, maybe he was thinking that the land did not belong to the Smiths; it belonged to the earth.
